'Jim Crow' System Stirs Disorders In Universities

Down To Weight, Wants Position

ALBANY (Spl.)—The petition of Miss Rose Feistater, New York City school teacher who failed to secure a license in 1931 because she was overweight, was under consideration here by the State Education Department who heard attorneys declare that the teacher was now down to the 150-pound weight specified when her application was refused.

Harry A. Mabel, Miss Feistater's counsel, said his client now weighs (see accompanying pictures) 154 pounds in full attire.

Opposing the petition was Shias Perry, assistant corporation counsel of New York City. He said that a teacher of over 150 pounds is considered as a "sub-standard risk." Counsel for both sides are preparing to file briefs in the case.

2 WARSAW U. PUPILS BEATEN

WARSAW (JTA)—Attempts to enforce a "Jim Crow" system of segregation against Jewish students were responsible this week for disorders in Warsaw and Lwow.

Renewed anti-Semitic rioting flared in the University of Warsaw when Nationalist (Endek) students attempted to segregate Jewish students in the mathematics college. Two Jewish students were severely beaten. The university was recently reopened after having been closed two weeks as a result of anti-Jewish disturbances.

Three Jews were in the hospital and a dozen Jews and Poles in jail as the result of an abortive attempt of Nationalist students to raid a meeting of Polish, Jewish and Ukrainian labor elements called to protest segregation of Jews in Lwow University.

The students adherents of the anti-Semitic National Democratic Party, were routed by the persons attending the meeting. They proceeded to avenge their defeat by assaulting Jewish passersby, wounding several, three of them severely. Police called to quell the disturbance, made a dozen arrests.

An order of the university rector forced Jewish students to occupy back benches in classrooms. The Jews walked out in protest.

Quiet For Week

WARSAW (JTA)—"Jim Crow" systems for Jews was introduced in a large Polish school last week, as anti-Semitism broke out again after a week's quiet.

An Endek majority in the faculty of the Lwow Polytechnic Institute forced the segregating of Jewish students in the classrooms. Deputy Emil Sommerstein informed the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Jewish students who walked out of their classes in protest against the segregation were ordered by the school authorities to return on penalty of being dropped from the rolls.

The entire Jewish student body walked out in protest against the order, which obliges them to occupy seats in segregated sections of the classrooms. Before walking out of their classes, Jewish student leaders voiced a formal protest against the illegal discrimination and insults to their honor.

In Katowice, Endeks stabbed to death Isaac Turteltaub, a young Jew who belonged to a group of Chalutzim.

The Jewish Deputies Club forwarded a demand to the city authorities of Lwow that the order, which is the first of its kind to be adopted by a higher institution of learning in Poland, be rescinded.

Nazis Invite 30 U.S. Youths To Germany

BERLIN (Spl.)—If the United States joins with other nations of the world in acceding to the present arrangements of the Nazis to send a group of thirty boys to join in a huge Nazi encampment near the site of the Olympic Games next summer, the visitors will probably get a taste of army life similar to that shown in the accompanying picture.

Approximately 5,000 youths between the ages of 14 and 18 are expected, according to present plan, to live in the encampment. All expenses of the visitors, while they are being inculcated with Nazi ideals, will be paid by the Nazis.

That the United States may send a group to the encampment is entirely possible, since the choice is left to the American Olympic Committee, headed by Avery Brundage.

MAGNES STANDS GROUND IN REPLY TO CRITICS

Dr. Magnes In Answer

LONDON (JTA)—In a letter published by the Manchester Guardian, Dr. Judah L. Magnes, president of the Hebrew University at Jerusalem, replies to the critics of his proposal to declare Palestine a permanent neutral.

Among the critics of Dr. Magnes' proposal were Lord Melchett and Col. Josiah Wedgwood, M.P.

Dr. Magnes points out that in his reply to them that "an attitude of true neutrality imposes sacrifices upon the neutral country, for one thing because it cannot deal actively with either belligerent." He explains that the purpose of his proposal was "to raise the whole question of the national and international status of mandated territories, more particularly of the Holy Land.

Such an attitude, Dr. Magnes urges, was in the minds of those who devised the mandates system; for a mandated territory is kept from being made into a military, naval, or air base, and is removed, in so far as this is at all possible, from participation generally in international conflicts. This expresses itself, in a measure, in Article 17 of the Palestine Mandate, which forbids conscription and, in the opinion of some interpreters permits the mandatory to use the mandated territory only as a place of passage for his armed forces.

"I adduced the additional consideration, which must weigh with the multitudes of Jews, Christians, and Moslems," Dr. Magnes goes on, "that this principle of neutrality for mandated territories might well begin with Palestine inasmuch as it is a Holy Land and shares a great variety of interests, religious, national, cultural, among its diverse population; and I thought that, if once applied to Palestine, this principle of neutrality might then find its way into other mandated territories and perhaps larger sections of the world, thus creating enclaves which the ravages of war would not touch."

Helps Blind, Finds Joy

ST. PAUL (Spl.)—Loved by all in St. Paul as "Grandma" Frankel, Chanuka is again bringing to Mrs. Esther Frankel the greatest joy of life—an opportunity to fill baskets with food and toys to take to the homes of the blind.

Mrs. Frankel claims extra-special relationship to all the Jewish children of this city, but she is St. Paul's most beloved woman among the Jewish and non-Jewish blind.

Growing out of the care given her blind father many years ago, Mrs. Frankel has become executive secretary of the Mutual Aid Blind Association, which cares for the blind in the counties surrounding St. Paul.

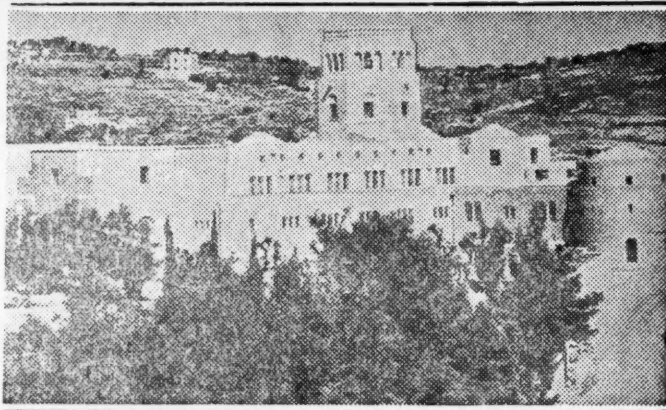

Twenty-seven years ago the Council of Jewish Women decided to organize a group to care for the Jewish blind. Immediately they chose Mrs. Frankel as director. Her first job was to take a census of blind Jewish persons in Ramsey county. Only nine persons were found, so the work was extended to all blind people in the community, under plans formulated by "Grandma" Frankel, which resulted in the Mutual Aid Blind Association.

The association now looks after blind and near-blind adults and children of pre-school age, having 225 persons on its list.

The association supplies the blind with the white canes which are their insignia. Every day "Grandma" Frankel calls on her blind friends, keeping them busy with the things they like to do. A complete Braille library is maintained.

Hans Herzl, the only son of Theodor Herzl, was converted to Catholicism. In 1930 he committed

Dating Bureau Head Declares 135 Jewish Girls Now Listed

BOSTON (Spl.)—The dating bureau for Jewish students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is becoming famous what with the daily newspapers carrying a statement from George Levy, a junior, head of the Menorah Society's bureau, that 135 girls attending colleges in Greater Boston, are now listed.

The bureau first submitted a questionnaire to the young women to learn their height, general appearance, taste in amusements and other points of interest. From the replies, Levy explained, a young man should be able to determine how expensive a date with a particular girl should be.

"The fellows usually ask for a nice looking girl," Levy explained, "but, of course, we haven't seen most of them." Heading the list is Miss Bobby Rapoport, of Bridgeport, Conn., titian-haired Simmons College junior. Levy did not deny that he might be prejudiced in her favor, admitting that he had "been out with her several times himself."

Steinberg Is Signer

The statement declared that birth control "will reduce the mortality of children, preserve mothers from invalidism and premature death, lighten the heavy burden of social distress and unemployment, and solve the urgent problem of overproduction that always leads to famine and plague, as in India and China, and that it often advanced as an excuse, if not a cause, for war, as in Germany, Japan and Italy today.

Is Love Enough?

A frank discussion in three parts, of love, sex and marriage, addressed to modern youth, by Dr. Barnett R. Brickner, Rabbi of Euclid Avenue Temple, Cleveland, Ohio.

While making some calls in the hospital the other day, I dropped in to see the mother of several married daughters. I no sooner came into the room when she told me she had some observations to make.

"Please, Rabbi," she said, "tell your audience, especially these young people in it, who may be contemplating marriage, that love is not enough—that a young man must be able to support a girl in the style she is accustomed to, and if he hasn't any money, he should get a dowry. Tell them that two can't live as cheaply as one—that no one can live on love alone—that love does better with fine clothes, a nice apartment, a maid, a car, etc.

Some of you may say her views are old-fashioned and unromantic, and that she is out of tune with modern times. But you will admit that her opinions have experience behind them.

Two Views of Marriage

In his "Memoirs de Deux Jeunes Mariees," which Balzac wrote a century ago, that great French novelist and keen student of human nature and love, gives us his version of the subject "is love enough?" In this novel, he relates the love lives of two friends, Renee d'Estorade and Louise de Chauvieu.

Renee married a man much older than herself, one who could give her everything, but whom she did not love at the time of their marriage. Her friend, Louise, who had a very affectionate nature and was romantic, married a man she loved passionately. Renee's marriage was a marriage of reason; Louise's of romance.

Balzac then proceeds to tell us how these two marriages turned out. Renee, who did not love her husband in the beginning, learned in time to love and respect him. Her life was very happy. Louise's marriage, on the other hand, ended disastrously for herself and her husband, because of her excessive love and jealousy.

Balzac, who favored Renee's type of arranged marriage, and who believed that love would generally follow, if the couple were young and normal, speaks his view at one place through his heroine:

"Marriage looks to life—while love only to pleasure. But marriage my dear Louise, remains when pleasures have vanished, and it gives rise to interests far more cherished. Perhaps all that is necessary for a happy marriage is friendship, which because it is indulgent and kind tolerates a good deal in the way of human imperfections."

Dr. Alfred Adler, famous Viennese psycho-analyst, writing on love and marriage, a hundred years later, confirms Balzac's opinion. "I would not advise anyone to get married before he or she has shown the ability to be a friend and to have friends. Each should be more interested in the loved one's happiness than in one's own. Each should desire, first of all, to embellish and relieve the other's life. All this talk about sexual agreement being the chief foundation of happiness in marriage is rubbish. Agreement on other fundamental problems is far more important. You cannot bagatelize love and sex. In love, there are deeper and more complicated problems than our sensations. We must not make a mere plaything out of love."

In the "Memoirs de Deux Jeunes Mariees" Balzac may be said to be presenting what we can now regard as the Continental and the American views of marriage. Renee's marriage is the typical Continental kind. It was arranged and was a marriage of convenience and common sense. The reputation and social standing of the families, the political and religious agreements, the matter of finances—these were everything. Love was secondary. Louise's marriage represents our American conception. In it, romantic love is all, and everything else—finances, social position, religion, etc., pale into insignificance beside it.

On Romantic Love

With reference to the American emphasis on romantic love, this should be said. What we are apt to call romantic love is usually 95 per cent lust and only 5 per cent reason. This kind of love is apt to give the lovers an untrue picture of the object of their affection. It is the sort of love that is blind. It is like light that is too strong; it blurs the vision. Under its spell, the lovers do not see the real persons to whom they are attracted, but an imaginary being. The man sees in the woman, a Madonna to worship and a mistress to love—both created by passion.

Romantic love is tempestuous, wild, exotic. It has a tendency to flare like a flame and to consume like a fire. It is apt to lead us to expect in marriage a happiness too marvelous to be realizable. It forebodes itself. In the end, when the flame of passion no longer flares, nothing is more disillusioning than to discover that the Madonna, who has been worshipped as a goddess, is after all only a woman with feet of clay, and that the stalwart hero is only a man—an ordinary human being.

Statistics indicate that in the Anglo-Saxon countries where marriages of love prevail, divorces have always been more numerous than on the Continent, where marriages are arranged. The Continental marriage trusts that love may develop between husband and wife, and if it does not, then love finds its outlet in a recognized and acknowledged system of double households—each separate; one legitimate, the other illegitimate—the one with wife and children, the other with a mistress. This double standard is, of course, abhorrent to our American way of thinking.

Mating and Marriage

When we examine into the nature of the Continental marriage, we find that it is based on the distinction made in primitive society between mating and marriage. In early society, sex was regarded as an instinctive biological drive and was permitted free indulgence. In fact, many primitive people did not associate sex with procreation. The former was a gratification of the passions, whereas children were a mysterious blessing and gifts from the gods. Marriage was a social institution, which had its basis in the mores of the people and its form was molded by economic and social conditions. For that matter this is still the case today.

A very early form of family life was the Matriarchate in which the mother was the head of the family. The children went by the mother's name and were her property. As a rule, they did not even know their fathers and were not dependent upon them for support. The mother's brother assumed the role of the father. In this type of primitive society, there was no individual or private property. The clan lived communally. Since women worked as hard as men, if not harder, men were not essential to their economic maintenance. In those early days, no shame was attached to pre-nuptial relations. If children came and there was no one to support them, they were destroyed. A woman could live with as many husbands as she desired.

Evolution of Family

In the course of time, a fundamental economic change took place, the passing from the Pastoral to the Agricultural stage of society. With it came the advent of private property and the Patriarchate or the family organization in which the father became the head of the family. The wife and the children now belong to him and are his chattel, his property. Sexual selection was transferred from the female to the male. It is in this stage of family life that the practice of the double standard, with all the prohibitions about sex came into being. Many of these have been retained in modern society. The Continental system of marriage, with its frank and acknowledged separation between mating and marriage can be traced back to this stage of family development.

In the Anglo-Saxon world, however, mating and marriage were welded together by romantic love in the hope that it would act as the binding cement between husband and wife. But this does not happen automatically. The fact that the union is declared a sacrament by the Church, does not ipso facto have the effect of welding the two souls into one. For mating and marriage to be really one, sex has to be transformed into love and love into marriage. This is an art. It must be cultivated. It is not instinctive.

In next week's installment Dr. Brickner will take up the art of love and what love means to men and women.

Mrs. Jack Friedman will leave Dec. 22 with her sister, Mrs. Harry Kahn, and Dr. Kahn, of Gary, Ind., for Miami, Fla. They will fly to Havana, and return to Indiana about Feb. 1.

The Best Editorial

The greatest sermon, the best editorial and the most effective example are all wrapped up innocently as it were in the announcement that the family of the late Jacob Goldsmith, of Memphis, Tenn., had turned over to St. Agnes College of that city the Goldsmith mansion for use as the Catholic institution's library.

In a formal ceremony, Elias J. Goldsmith, Mrs. A. Y. Herzberg, Leo Goldsmith and Fred Goldsmith, all of the family of Mr. Jacob Goldsmith, relinquished the palatial mansion to Sister Margaret, Sister Superior of the college, and Sister Albertine, dean of the Academy.

Unlike Aesop's fables, the moral of this splendid gesture needs no explaining. The door which formerly showed at its threshold the mazuzah now harbors the crucifix, and relationship in Memphis between Jew and Catholic is cemented by a bond far more durable than is in the power of mere speech or of mere words.

Jewish Radio Programs Effective Against Anti-Semitism

In the case of the Jew the statement that ignorance is the cause of prejudice, means that ignorance is the root of Anti-Semitism.

Consequently, any social force that brings about general enlightenment about the Jew is of major importance in the fight for good-will and tolerance.

Such a social force is the radio program, and more particularly, the Jewish radio program.

In this paper's columns last week was listed thirty-seven Jewish programs emanating in studios throughout the nation. Representing U. S. Jewry in the exposition of Jewish ethics, thinking, and less often, religion, these programs form a powerful medium for molding public opinion. If WLW with its 500,000 watt station reaches 25,000,000 people, then the program of Rabbi Jacob Javahish, with its watery menu of vacuous platitudes, must be reckoned with as shaping the opinion of millions.

Fortunately, however, from the standpoint of the propagation of the heritage of Israel, thirty-one of the stations listed repeated programs by such spiritual giants as Rabbis William W. W. W., Edward L. Israel, and Louis I. Newman.

Jewish radio programs, it is common knowledge, draw more response from non-Jews than from Jews. The non-Jew, who less he is of the upper strata has never heard a rabbi, is surprised at the smoothness of diction, clearness of thought and lights of ethics of the rabbi.

Since Jewish programs are important, it behooves the directors of these programs to maintain them on the highest scales. The N.B.C. weekly "Synagogue of the Air" and the C.B.S. "Church of the Air" with its monthly assignment of Jewish programs are stamped definitely as the preferred type because of the fact that they are chain programs and because their speakers are chosen from the nation at large.

Properly supervised Jewish programs, illogically enough, can do more to dispel Anti-Semitism than the deeds of our great artists, the compositions of our great composers and the discourses of our great doctors.

The Detroit Group Plan

What made Jewish life in ancient Palestine, and what made it in Athens so productive of good was the general participation by the populace in the affairs of the land. Holidays in Palestine found the entire nation visiting the Temple at Jerusalem, and elections in Athens found everyone taking part.

So that the move inaugurated by Dr. Leo M. Franklin, spiritual leader of Temple Beth El, of Detroit, toward the democratization of the synagogue should, if successful, do much to offset the tending tendency away from congregation affiliation.

Twenty-five years ago Temple Beth El discarded the system of assigning preferred seats to members paying more dues, in favor of the unassigned seating method. Now the new plan, to be known as the Detroit Temple Group Plan, contemplates a new measure of synagogal participation by the individual.

First, the Temple membership will be divided into seven groups, each with a leader, an assistant leader, and a secretary. Presenting a cross section of the synagogue, the group leader will form, together with the rabbi and the president, the Congregational Council. The various groups will undertake synagogal projects, hold discussions and make suggestions, in fact, operate as a synagogue within a synagogue. Out of this plan, in addition to greater interest, its proponents hope to develop new leadership so that the hierarchy which under the present system does all the work, if it functions, or throws all the work on the rabbi if it fails to function, may be wiped out.

The operation of the Detroit Temple Group Plan might be compared with profit by the only synagogues afflicted with lack of members. Theodora, who was converted to Catholicism in 1930 he converted

It's Just Beginning

To those defeatists who believe that the fight against America's participation in the Olympics at Berlin is finished, the following: the battle has just begun . . .

A clever plan of strategy has been mapped out and the results are expected to be sad for Mr. Brundage.

Contrary to the general impression, Mr. Brundage's accession to the throne of the A. A. U. was secretly welcomed by the anti-Olympic faction. The idea is that now, as the A. A. U. president, he's very much on the spot since an actual majority of the A. A. U. proper (that is, without its affiliated bodies) voted against participation.

The barrage against Avery has already opened. By the time this is printed, it will be going at full blast. Don't be surprised if a special convention of the A. A. U. is called sometime next month, as the result of a growing demand that Brundage resign. . . . Incidentally, we have it on the best of authority that the behind-the-scenes strategist of the pre-convention anti-Olympics conflict was Harry L. Glucksmann, executive director of the Jewish Welfare Board. . . .

And we happen to know that Mr. Brundage was the victim of Hitler-hallucinations when he said that one million dollars was spent by the anti-Olympics forces. . . .

We'd like to have the difference between that figure and what actually was spent . . . A good estimate would be about $5,000. The Committee on Fair Play in Sport, the prime mover in the campaign, occupies very modest office space. . . . The majority of its staff is volunteer. . . .

And speaking of expenditures, that warning blast by Gen. Sherill when he returned from Germany, about a wave of anti-Semitism being unleashed if the agitation against U. S. participation didn't cease, had a painful effect. . . . It frightened several moneyed men into buttoning up their purses when donations were asked to help keep the battle alive. . . . Judge Mahoney and his family are going to Europe on a visit soon. . . . Wonder if he'll go to Germany?

Mish-Mash

That was quite a reprimand Nathan Straus tossed into the laps of The New Palestine, ZOA organ. . . . Mr. Straus voiced resentment at the attacks appearing on the publication's editorial page against Dr. Magnes, Rabbi Jonah Wise, Mr. Vladeck "and even Prof. Sylvain Levy, that great leader of French Jewry, who is not safe from your criticism even in his grave." . . .

"I would most earnestly urge," Mr. Straus, who is chairman of the New York United Palestine Appeal, concluded, "that the columns . . . be not open to any writers who wish to use The New Palestine to air their own sarcastic and venomous opinions of leaders who may differ with our ideas in detail but who are nevertheless devoting themselves to the service of our people." . . . Are somebody's ears red? . . . Why hasn't Rabbi Stephen S. Wise accepted the national chairmanship of the United Palestine Appeal? . . . He will eventually, but a few things must be ironed out before he does. . . . Sam Cohen, young attorney in Louis (ORT) Boudin's office isn't worried about an anonymous postcard threat that Nazis will get him. . . . The postal authorities are investigating, however. . . . Two Bostonians will direct the United Palestine Appeal. . . . One is Robert Silverman, the other is Mendel Fisher. . . . Fisher's appointment, incidentally, is considered a great victory for the Jewish National Fund, of which he is campaign director, since in former campaigns the Keren Hayesod has had the preference. . . .

From London

Our Jacob Epstein correspondent in London informs us that the famed sculptor is about to toss himself into the middle of a new art imbroglio. . . . Epstein, who introduced boxing gloves as a part of the artist's equipment, to quote our waggish correspondent, is doing the curtain for a new all-Jewish ballet, "David." . . . He has admitted that there'll be some original ideas embodied in the back-drop. . . . And if that does not start a row, then Jacob Epstein isn't Jacob Epstein any more. . . . The same source informs us that Emanuel Shinwell, the chap who trounced Ramsay MacDonald in the British parliamentary elections, is known as one of the toughest fighters in British politics.

He never forgets and never forgives. . . . Not content with beating his former chief by 20,000 votes, after the election he assailed Prime Minister Baldwin for being "wet nurse" to the MacDonalds for trying to find "safe seats" for the two pre-government laborites. . . .

Ramblings

For the first time in the thirty years of its existence, a Poale Zion banquet was strictly Kosher. . . . It was the banquet celebrating the party's thirtieth anniversary. . . . The peace agreement between Miz-rachi and other factions at the last Zionist Congress was behind the sudden orthodoxy. . . . Speaking of kashruth, Rose Freistater, the overplump teacher who dieted more than thirty pounds of avoirdupois off herself to get a teacher's license in New York, included bacon in her widely publicized diet. . . . Abraham Goldberg, famous Zionist orator, is a father-in-law. . . . His daughter, Dr. Natalie D. made him one by yessing Dr. Nathan Prenskey. . . .

Appeal Not To Buy Nazi Goods For Xmas

To the Editor:

Christmas is the festival which commemorates the birth of Christ, the Prince of Peace and Good Will Among Men.

Don't desecrate this festival by buying toys and other things made in present day Nazi-Germany.

Upon the crooked cross of Nazism the very teachings and ideals of Christianity are being crucified. Nazism wages a campaign against civilization and religion, whether Catholic, Protestant, Jewish or any other religion.

Every Christmas tree bearing toys coming from Nazi-Germany finds its branches laden with exports from factories subsidized and directed by a national policy of racial and religious hatred—a mockery to the teachings of the Prince of Peace and Good Will.

Every cent you spend on goods made in Nazi-Land is strengthening the hands of the enemies of humanity, the enemies of the Church, the enemies of Christ and His teachings.

If you buy foreign made goods, look carefully for the stamp of the country of its origin. Shun, as unclean the articles bearing the stamp "Made in Germany," "Made in Saxony," "Made in Bavaria," etc.

For the sake of all that is dear to you, for the sake of humanity, DON'T BUY Christmas toys or any other products made in Nazi-Germany.

"Audiences in Egypt and Palestine are deeply attentive and demand the best music," Mr. Elman stated.

Jewish Scientist For 5-Meal Day

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (Spl.)—Five meals a day instead of three will increase industrial output by 10 per cent, Dr. Leon A. Greenberg, a Yale University scientist, declares in "Diet and Physical Efficiency," published here by the Yale University Press, in collaboration with Dr. Howard W. Haggard.

Studies in a nearby Connecticut factory have convinced the scientists that the five-meal plan is far superior to the habitual three-meal plan. The new arrangement, according to the scientists, does not call for any greater consumption of food, but for a division of the amount eaten into five parts. In the Yale plan the extra meals were included at the end of the third hour of work in the morning and at the same time in the afternoon.

Tel Aviv Library In Need of Books

CINCINNATI (JTA)—An appeal for books to fill the shelves of the Tel Aviv Municipal Library has been received by Jacob R. Marcus of the Hebrew Union College.

The appeal points out that the beautiful building has few volumes because the Palestine Government does not look with favor upon an appropriation for the library. The library of the all-Jewish city, the appeal says, needs reference books of a general nature as well as books of Jewish literature.

Mount Guns Near Haifa

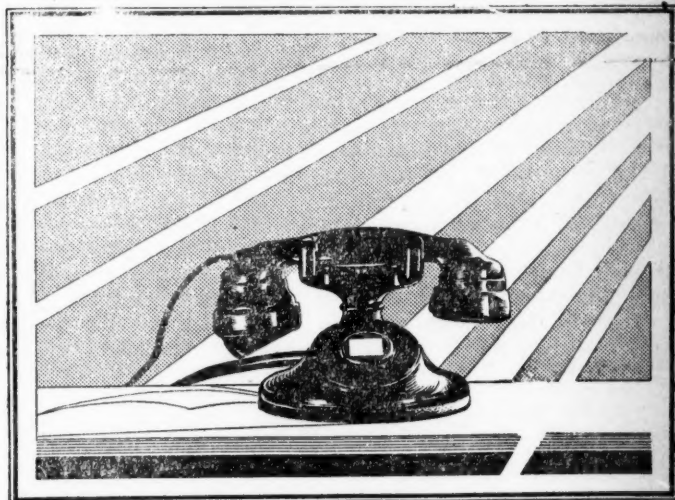

HAIFA (JTA)—A total of fifty-six big guns have been mounted in and around this most important Palestine port as a defense against possible attacks, it was ascertained by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency this week.

The guns, of varying bores, are strategically distributed as follows: Six are mounted near the railway workshops. Four are at Shemen, six at Bath Galim, four at the municipal baths. Around Carmel, seven are mounted. Four are in the Bahaian quarter of the city. Eight are located in colonies bordering Haifa and Acre. Nazis Befuddle Relief Question

BERLIN (JTA)—Further efforts on the part of the Nazi relief authorities to deceive foreign opinion into believing that Jews are not excluded from the general Winter relief campaign were disclosed in the German press last week.

The press reports a reception given by the Nazi Party's foreign department for foreign diplomats and newspaper correspondents in the course of which Winter Relief Commissar Hilgenfeldt's statement conveyed the impression that Jews have not been excluded from sharing the benefits of the general relief drive, which is contrary to fact.

Music publishers have been ordered by the president of the Reich Chamber of Music not to list in their catalogues the works of Mendelssohn, Offenbach and other Jewish composers or musicians.

When it is considered that Germany has made special inducements to importers of her toys by allowing an unusually large percentage of blocked marks to be used for their payment and has also assisted their manufacturers by heavy subsidies, the results obtained are discouragingly small from the German standpoint," the statement concludes.
